

Carney's "neutrality" and how Norway was bullied

We have been forwarded this interesting piece which casts doubt about the neutrality of the Bank of England's governor Mark Carney. Given the high-profile interventions he has made in the debate, people may be interested to read a bit more about his background.

Another very worthwhile clip to have reached my in-box is this interview with Norwegian politician Anne Tvinnereim and Heming Olaussen of Norway's Nei til Eu movement who talked about the false predictions of economic calamity if Norway voted not to join the EU. It has already received nearly 100,000 viewings and is widely recommended as the scaremongering has resumed with a vengeance in recent days