

'Weekend marches. A taste of things to come?'

Author and contributing columnist for the Bruges Group, Michael Wood looks at the changing face of Britain and the implications for us all if those in charge abdicate their responsibility for upholding and defending Britain's institutions.

On the evidence before us that is exactly what is happening and it will get worse under a future Starmer government according to the author. And it's being done to us by those we elected to represent our views. How naïve can you be?

"The self-appointed elite are treating the people with contempt. Our country, its traditions, freedoms and democracy are being destroyed. Destroyed by a minority who are so obsessed with their 'One World' WEF ambition that they view subversion as helpful. A way of destroying what they despise so that their new can be built."

No wonder people are so angry. This is an existential issue and one that needs to be tackled with the utmost urgency. Our very survival as a nation depends on it.

Another Glorious Revolution, or a Caliphate?

By Michael Wood

Is this our future?

We are in trouble. It started when Ted Heath told lies about the Common Market and its true intention. Since then, a certain type of self-serving politician has lied about everything from expenses to democracy. According to Nick Robinson, Lindsay Hoyle can be forgiven for caving into Starmer because, "he's only human and wants to keep his job". There was a time when people resigned on principle. A time when a Minister resigned because a civil servant had made a mistake and as the boss, he took responsibility. No more, we have weasel words taken "very seriously" and 'staying on to fix the problem'. No honour, no respect for democracy, for the electorate, for the position they have been entrusted with. Now, it seems, a desire to keep the job trumps everything.

Religious extremists appear to have taken over the political party that, it seems, will form our next government. As they desire to impose a Caliphate it is not unreasonable to wonder if it might be our last. That they are extremists is obvious when one considers what they protest against. When Yazidi women were burnt alive by ISIS thugs there were no protest marches. When girls were denied education in Afghanistan their Muslim sisters in the UK were silent. No burning of Burqas to protest the treatment of women in Iran. No marching in solidarity with oppressed women in Saudi. The organisers of the Gaza marches are hard line Islamists. Their useful idiot supporters, appallingly that includes the Police, fail to understand that if the Caliphate is ever imposed, they too will suffer.

The Brexit referendum should have been a turning point. a restoration of democracy. The Judiciary, Civil Service and much of Parliament decided otherwise. The shameful attempts to overthrow democracy and the continuing campaign to do so, has debased democracy in this country. Hoyle's action at the behest of Starmer are the latest manifestation of a rotten core at the heart of our country.

The self-appointed elite are treating the people with contempt. Our country, its traditions, freedoms and democracy are being destroyed. Destroyed by a minority who are so obsessed with their 'One World' WEF ambition that they view subversion as helpful. A way of destroying what they despise so that their new can be built.

There are very few MPs who are worth voting for. Labour is lost to democracy, the Lib Dems a joke and the Conservative party so full of small S socialists that it's unrecognisable. It's hard, but if the majority want to live in a country with values they recognise, it is time to fight back. The coming general election need not be a choice between Islamic controlled Labour and a broken Tory party. It should be about restoring democracy.

The Glorious Revolution was about freeing us from the straitjacket of Papal rule. Because of it we developed as a nation and finally, in the 20th century, achieved representative democracy. Heath, Major, Blair, Brown and supporters of the EU as a unitary state sought to make us an EU fief. The people said no.

It is time yet again for the people to reject what the elite plan. It is time to vote for a person or party that will really restore and protect our liberty. The present parties in parliament are complicit in the destruction of our freedoms and democracy. We must wake up. Say no to Woke. Say no religious dictators. Say no to managed decline. The British people are better than this. We are better than parliament. But, we will only restore what is ours, with action at the ballot box.
