

Death of a parliamentary colleague

Death of a parliamentary colleague – Nigel Spearing

Nigel's death comes at a turning point in our long and arduous campaign against UK membership of the EU. He was always a strong opponent of the 'European Project' to build a United States of Europe without first getting the approval of its peoples. He was one of the first Labour politicians to appreciate there could be no compromise with the Eurofanatics in the British Press and Parliament. The weakness of their arguments was finally exposed in the 2016 Referendum campaign. Until his final illness, Nigel was a stalwart of our long drawn out battle to save the country we loved from an ignominious future as an outpost of a superstate. His work for our cause over several decades, in and out of Parliament should be long remembered

Eric Deakins

Former Labour MP

1970 – 1987