On Saturday thousands of Rejoiners march on Parliament to demand Brexit be axed

“Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more” says our Chairman

On Saturday the BBC, Sky News and ITN will no doubt be giving significant coverage to the “March to Rejoin”. Whilst most of the marchers will be from the extremist fringe, this march should nevertheless send a warning to all Brexiteers – the fight is not yet over.

In this report we bring readers up to date with news of the march. We may well be looking at the rump of the Remain movement but it’s very well-funded and very active on social media and in its political campaigning. And it’s clearly on the rise.

£20,000 raised for this one event

The 'GoFundMe' site for this march shows that a total of £20,101 has been raised for this single event at the time of writing (4am, Sun 04 Sept 2022).

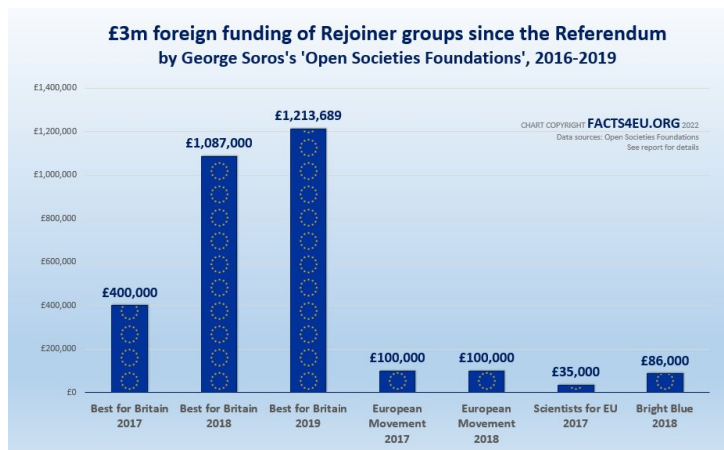

£20,000 for a single day's output... The CIBUK.Org team would love to have this sum for an entire month's work, to help us to rejuvenate and achieve the aims and objectives of the Campaign.

This is the tip of the iceberg, however. As we recently reported, foreign funding of Rejoiner groups stands at over £3 million.

Summary

Foreign funding of UK Rejoiner groups, 2016-2019

This is only OSF funding – we do not have details of other funding

- Best for Britain: £400,000 (2017), £1,087,000 (2018),

£1,213,689 (2019)

- European Movement: £100,000 (2017), £100,000 (2018)
- Scientists for EU: £35,000 (2017)
- Bright Blue: £86,000 (2016)
- TOTAL: £3,021,689 over four years after the Referendum

Note: We do not have details of any other funding that may have been received by these groups from OSF since 2019, nor the amount of funding from other sources.

Who is speaking on Saturday?

Aim of the National Rejoin March

We want the word 'Rejoin' to become as mainstream as the word 'Brexit' became, to force Rejoin onto the agenda as quickly as possible and keep it there.

Join us at the start of the Rejoin campaign, on the FIRST National Rejoin March!

The first speaker is Steve Bray, whom readers will know as the constant irritant in broadcast interviews outside Parliament with his never-ending “STOP BREXIT” shouts.

Other luminaries include Femi Oluwole of the unfortunately-named OFOC group (“Our Future Our Choice”) and Madeleine Kay, who used to dress up as ‘EU Supergirl’.

Then follows a list of people we’ve never heard of until we come to one name: (Lord) Andrew Adonis.

A former Social Democratic party member, then a LibDem member, then a Labour party member, Adonis was never once elected to Parliament

Instead Tony Blair gave him a peerage and used him in various appointed government roles.

Almost 50 Rejoinder groups are massing

According to the march’s website, 47 Rejoinder groups are backing this march. Whilst we have no doubt that some of these groups are tiny, it gives some idea of the scale of the anti-democratic rebellion.

We also found it interesting that the largest donor to their ‘GoFundMe’ web page continues to be Steve Bray (£1,500), despite him not having had a ‘proper job’ for all those years.

The irony of Rejoiner ignorance

Judging from the poor quality (and often abusive nature) of social media posts from Rejoiners and the absence of any facts on the 'MarchForRejoin' website, we doubt that the marchers will hear any real facts from the speakers.

If any of the speakers are brave enough to try, we doubt they will have done their research as we have done seven days-a-week for the last seven years.

The irony is that since 2016 Brexiteers have had to endure an endless stream of insults about being ignorant and poorly-educated. Brexiteers continue to be told they voted Leave based on some words on the side of a bus.

To be clear, we do not know of ONE single Leave voter who made their choice based on that slogan.

Many Leave voters made their decision based on overall instinct – and they were right, as the British public so often are. Many Remain voters also voted on instinct but many also voted based on the fear generated by the massed Establishment ranks and the government-sponsored campaign, prophesying an increasing panoply of Armageddons if the United Kingdom were to leave the EU.
