

Fishing – Keep up the pressure!

Most readers will have heard about Fishing for Leave's demonstration against the surrender of our fishing industry outside Parliament yesterday. Although a much smaller scale event than the flotilla of fishing boats which sailed down the Thames in June 2016, a valid point was made.

Growing Parliamentary opposition to the surrender on fishing could scupper the whole transitional deal, which would unquestionably be a good thing. In order to keep up the pressure on our MPs, if you haven't already done so, please sign this petition and pass it on to your friends.

Fishing could be a real Brexit success story. It is an iconic industry and fishermen enjoy widespread public support, especially given their scandalous treatment since 1973 in order to join the European project. The Government has apparently been taken aback by the scale of the protest over the surrender on fishing. Sadly, as the linked article suggests, this suggests that "Theresa May's team has never entirely "got" Brexit". Perhaps, but this is no excuse for such an unnecessary sell-out and we must make it very clear to them that it is unacceptable.
