

Looking forward to a free and sovereign 2019

We would like to wish all of our members, supporters and readers a very Merry Christmas, and a free and sovereign 2019.

Of course, we know that the latter is far from guaranteed. All we want for Christmas is for the referendum result – and hence our democracy – to be respected. That shouldn't be too much to ask. Indeed, we shouldn't have to ask for it at all – it should be a given. But clearly more than four decades of the EU steadily eroding our sovereignty have taken their toll on our democratic values.

CIB has been fighting to extract the UK from the European project since 1969. And we know that, even assuming a satisfactory Brexit in March 2019, the threat the EU poses to our sovereignty will remain. Well-funded Remoaner elites will try to drag us back into the EU for years to come. Our Europhile establishment will attempt to sign us up piecemeal to so-called 'co-operation' and 'partnerships', such as in defence or law and order. And CIB will continue to fight for UK independence as we enter our fiftieth year.

The CIB website will now take a festive break until 7 January 2019. Look out for some exciting developments in the new year, including a brand new website with a fresh, modern look, which we hope will help our message reach a new generation of proud defenders of national sovereignty.
