

The message is getting out as the scare stories get sillier and sillier

Today it's the threat of war in Europe from David Cameron and the possibility of a drop in the vastly-inflated UK house prices from George Osborne. Perhaps we should start taking odds on what will be the next Brexit threat the Prime Minister and his acolytes will try to scare us with – the return of the Black Death, an invasion from Mars, a plague of locusts or the next ice age, perhaps?

Meanwhile, in the real world, the message is getting out. Readers might like to enjoy these pictures of some CIB-sponsored placards now gracing the side of the M6. More are to follow on other motorways soon.

