See and hear our Australian cousins' reactions

Tomorrow (Thurs) morning at 5am UK time the Chairman of CIBUK.Org and Facts4EU.Org is the special guest on a one-hour live special from Sydney Australia, which will be live-streamed on YouTube and Facebook.

This will also be available recorded. In this live broadcast he will answer the interviewer's questions in a free-ranging discussion :-

- Are there any advantages for Britain to rejoin the European Union?
- What is his vision of the UK on the world stage?
- How did the Tories go from a landslide victory to looming defeat?
- Does the political party system need reform?
- Promotion for the Sir Christopher Meyer book 'Survivors'
- What is the significance of the EU-Aus trade deal?
- What is the significance of the AUKUS agreement?
- Should we all be worried about China's encroachment in the South China Sea and how can the UK help?

Observations

For decades the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union froze out the traditionally-strong links between the British and our Australian cousins. After many years the EU has still been unable to agree a trade deal with Australia, but the newly-independent UK managed it in just one year.

Since Brexit the UK has agreed a free trade agreement with Australia, has agreed a submarine deal called AUKUS, (which severely upset France's President Macron), and is generally improving relations between the two Commonwealth countries.
